many. Spreckles has formed an allisance with the El Paso and Southwestern, the Phelps Dodge railroad from El Paso to Benson, Ariz., by which either the Phelps Dodge line will be extended from Benson down the San Pedre and Gila Rivers to Yuna, where it will connect with the Spreckles line or the latter will be built 40 Benson or Douglas. A rich country would be tapped and many believe that the Phelps-Dodge people, who have been looking for a Pacific Coast outlet for some time, and are said to have designs against Harriman's absolute control of the transportation of this part of the country, are interested in the early completion of the San Diego. Southern, which would give them entry to San Diego.

It is known that Spreckles has secured needed funds to build, and it would surprise no one if the Phelps-Dodge Interests are found to have supplied some of this money.

A line from Benson to Yuna would is much lower is being countenanced.

King Sicco, an Oriental burlesqu King Sicolo, an Oriental buriesque operetta, was the tille of the plaproduced last night by Reed Arbuckle and their clever company at the Orpheum. The bill was elaborate in the way of setting, and the entire piece throughout was one of the cleverest bits of comedy seen at the level them. "Yes, he's near sighted. Says be can't distinguish faces 50 feet away." the cleverest bits of comedy seen at the local theatre during the past season. The music was extremely good and in strict keeping with the play. "I'm the Kid that Built the Pyramids," by Ben Sellar, and "The Crocodile Isle," by Roscoe Arbuckle, were heartily encored. "My Sulu Luin Loo," an entrancing ungle song and number was one of the features of the evening, and cleverly done by Minta Dufree. The fun was hilarious and Reed in the role of the newmade king, was in the lime light all of the evening, and both he and Arbuckle had the house in roars of laugister during the entire show. The costumes were pretty, and the play good. It will again be repeated this evening.
